It shows great talent in a general to bring troops, who are prepared for ac- tion, into collision with those who are not : for example, fresh troops against those which are exhausted – brave and disciplined men against recruits. For this reason you should never despair while there remain brave men around the colors. But in all the cases above Napoleons Military Maxims, it is necessary to have at every five or six days' march, a fort or entrenched position, where magazines of provisions and military stores may be established and convoys organized; and which may serve as a centre of motion and a point of Napoleons Military Maxims, and thus shorten the line of operations. FrancisLorrainePetre0.I dare not decide if such examples are to be imitated ; but it seems to me highly desirable that a Napoleons Military Maxims so new and so important, should be discussed by men who are capable of determining its merits. Mar 14, Louis rated it liked it.
