One is reminded of the boy whose cat gave birth to kittens. Within the Lutheran tradition, conservative groups such as the Missouri Synod also hold mostly to a cessationist position. But this again is no more a problem for us today than it would have been for Christians in the first century. Furthermore, it portrays prophetic ministry in an entirely different light from the one Gaffin attempts to deduce from Ephesians

There is yet another position, held by a vast number of evangelicals who think is a vitally important point that cessationism cannot explain.
